Telerik wpf gridview edit template.

Figure 1: RadGridView with CellTemplate and CellEditTemplate defined When you define a CellEditTemplate for a column, the default validation mechanism is bypassed as you're directly binding to the source property. The following code example shows how to use custom editors (ProgressBar and Slider) to display and edit the Units On Order column's values. Figure 2: RadGridView with CellTemplate and CellEditTemplate defined for a single column Tips about CellTemplate and CellEditTemplate You can set the CellTemplate and CellEditTemplate in the code behind. See the Using DataTemplate in Code article for details. This article describes how to customize the RadGridView columns by using predefined column types and how to extend the functionality of the columns by defining a non-default editor. If you set DataMemberBinding set to StartingDate, the aggregation, sorting, grouping and filtering operations on the column will be done based on the StartingDate property. Using Predefined Column Types RadGridView provides a set of predefined column types like GridViewCheckBoxColumn, GridViewComboBoxColumn, GridViewSelectColumn, etc. Example 1: Setting columns' CellTemplate and CellEditTemplate The RadGridView defined above will be displayed as shown in Figure 1. View Example: How to Use Custom Editors to Edit Cell Values NoteUsing BaseEdit descendants is not recommended. In scenarios with a defined column.CellEditTemplate, the new value of the editor is not available in the arguments of the CellEditEnded event that is raised when committing an edit. To get the right value in e.NewValue, create your own Custom Column and override its GetNewValueFromEditor method. Example 2: Setting the CellTemplate and CellEditTemplate of a single column The RadGridView defined above will be displayed as shown in Figure 1. To achieve this, create a CellTemplate or CellEditTemplate for the column: CellTemplate: Gets or sets the data template for the cell in view mode. If you require this validation, create a custom column editor instead, that you can customize in accordance with the requirements and the type of properties exposed in your business object. When you use a standard GridViewDataColumn, the RadGridView control automatically generates controls for the cell's view and edit modes: Default controls in view mode: TextBlock; For string, numeric and DateTime properties CheckBox; For boolean properties Default controls in edit mode: TextBox; For string and numeric properties CheckBox; For boolean properties RadDatePicker; For DateTime properties Creating CellTemplate and CellEditTemplate for a Column Sometimes you need to extend the functionality of a column and define a custom editor. Namespace: DevExpress.Xpf.Grid.Assembly: DevExpress.Xpf.Grid.v21.2.Core.dll Declaration [Browsable(false)] public ControlTemplate EditTemplate { get; set; } Public Property EditTemplate As ControlTemplate If the Name property of a control used to display cell values is set to PART Editor, the GridControl treats it as its inner control, i.e., fills it with values and enables search results highlighting. We set the RadDateTimePicker as a CellEditTemplate for the DateTime column type and the RadNumericUpDown as a CellTemplate for the Salary column. CellEditTemplate: Gets or sets the data template for the cell in edit mode. In the next example, we demonstrate how to set them both for the same column. See Also Example 1 demonstrates how to use both properties to customize your columns. The first example illustrates how to define either a CellTemplate or CellEditTemplate. See Also Feedback Was this page helpful? You can also conditionally apply different data templates to RadGridView cells by using the CellTemplateSelector and CellEditTemplateSelector properties. Tell us here. Thanks for your feedback! Any other suggestions? If the user does not need to perform any aggregation, sorting, grouping or filtering operations for the column, then you can use a GridViewColumn instead.
